

BOARD GIVEN SCHOOL REPORT

Hudson Reviews Financial Situation as End of Year Nears.

Members of the city board of education discussed the current financial situation of the city schools and anticipated position at the end of this year at a meeting last night in the office of Superintendent C. A. Hudson.

A financial statement prepared by Mr. Hudson was presented to members in two parts. The first shows general fund receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year of 1935, and the second part presents the board retirement fund position.

If all receipts were collected during the present month the schools would have a balance of $17,572.01 on hand at the end of the year. However, Mr. Hudson estimated that actual collections will cut this figure to about $22,433.51. This money is expected to be used for operation during the month of January. This was pointed out as essential, since no receipts for 1936 from the various taxing and other sources will be available until February.

In presenting figures on the subject of receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year in the general fund and board retirement fund, Mr. Hudson called to the attention of the board that appropriations and expenditures have remained within the income of the schools.

In the first part of his statement Mr. Hudson shows that the balance on hand in the general fund last Jan. 1 was $40,237.26. Actual receipts received to the first of this month totaled $299,652.25, while estimated receipts due to Dec. 31 amount to $28,892.39, bringing to $497,982.03 the total receipts for the year.

Charged up against that figure are expenditures. Actual expenditures paid in the first of this month total $234,192.70. Estimated expenditures to Dec. 31 amount to $34,116.21, bringing to $268,308.91 the total expense for the year.

The statement of the condition of the board retirement fund shows actual receipts received to Dec. 1 amounted to $130,108.63, and that estimated receipts from the personal property tax collection figure $2,912.52. The balance on hand in the fund last Jan. 1 was $10,525.59. Actual bonds and interest paid total $142,277.23, leaving an estimated $16,234.61 on hand at the end of this year.

The board also approved payment of bills totaling $3,817.32.

Expenditures in Arkansas have shown that the balloon tires of an automobile of the right gauge will cling to railroad rails and run on tracks as long as no attempt is made to steer the car.

STALIN ENTERS "HUMANIZING" PROCESS

After having been Russia's man of mystery for years since he became its absolute dictator, Joseph Stalin (left) is being given a build-up as a "human" by his regime, with Russian newspapers running sentimental stories about his mother and plenty of new photos such as this, showing him in a moment of relaxation with K. E. Voroshilov, Soviet minister of war. He's even kissing babies for the photographers and joining tribes as honorary chief. (International News Photo)

ELLSWORTH ABSENCE WORRIES ROOSEVELT

State Department Planning Relief Expedition Into Arctic Waters

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—President Roosevelt's personal concern for the welfare of Ellsworth, the missing Antarctic explorer, was expressed yesterday by the state department which said it was expediting plans for a relief expedition.

The president has indicated his personal interest concerning the disappearance of Ellsworth, said a department spokesman. The present plan is to send a relief expedition, which has been expedited by the state department, to the Arctic region. The expedition is being led by a party of men and dogs, and is expected to reach the Arctic region in a few days.

The statement said that an accident in which a plane intended for use in the search for Ellsworth was wrecked at Atlanta, Ga., was unfortunate, but it was expected another plane would be substituted.

CHRIST'S HEALING OF SICK, SERMON TOPIC

Rev. Will J. Harney Continues Special Services at Asbury M. E. Church.

"The Healing of the Paralytic" was the topic of a sermon by Rev. Will J. Harney of Wilmore, Ky., given at last night's revival service at the Asbury M. E. church. More than 60 young people were among the persons present.

During his sermon on Christ's healing of the sick as found in the second chapter of Mark, Rev. Harney said: "The doors were blocked because of the great crowd within the house; hence they carried the man to the top of the house, tore off part of the roof and let him down at the feet of Jesus."

"Jesus healed the man; He saw their faith, their unshaken faith, and the faith which would not take 'no' for an answer; hence He healed the man."

Interest is increasing in the meetings each night, the pastor, Rev. Richard Black, pastor, said today.

Tonight Rev. Harney will speak on "Sin Against the Holy Ghost." A song service will be held at 7:30 and preaching will be at 8.

LEAGUE MAY EASE PRESSURE FOR PEACE

were handling the negotiations was voiced in London, where high commissioners of the British dominions were summoned to the foreign office for consultations.

The British seeking an understanding with the French, began a new series of conversations.

Objections Not Listed

The nature of the British objections was not known. They were reported to have accepted in the main the proposals advanced by Laval and Hoare, based on an exchange of territories between Italy and Ethiopia.

A delay in consideration of an oil embargo, it was pointed out, would give Mussolini more time to weigh the peace proposals advanced. The French cabinet met today to consider the question of peace in the light of the reported British reservations.

Meanwhile, at the war front, hand beyond fighting was reported to Rome by Italy's northern forces.

War correspondents advised their publications in the Italian capital that both Marshal Pietro Badoglio and Gen. Rodolfo Graziani, commanders on the northern and southern fronts, foresaw possibilities of more serious fighting soon.

ROOSEVELT TACKLES NEXT YEAR'S BUDGET

Message to Congress and Relief Problem Also Big Chores He Confronts.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Tanned by a southern sun, President Roosevelt returned to the White House today to plunge immediately into three weeks of intensive work before congress convenes Jan. 3.

Next year's financial budget, his annual message on the state of the nation and the ever-present problem of human relief were top-liners among the problems demanding attention before the 74th congress begins its final and "breathing spell" session.

A late afternoon White House conference of his financial advisers was summoned immediately by the chief executive to discuss the budget for the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

Mr. Roosevelt said in Atlanta Nov. 30 that "we have passed the peak of appropriations" and without new taxes "we can look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit."

Translating this goal into figures for submission to congress was, however, a bulging task. The current year's deficit stood at $1,732,000,000 today and was estimated to exceed $3,000,000,000 by June 30.

By The Associated Press

left the balcony and went out into the street. In the taxi he lit a cigarette and smoked furiously. "I'm going to ask to be transferred. Or resign or something. Anyway I'm going back to the States as soon as I see this rotten mess through."

"You was emphatic," she crawled fevered. "And your brow is somewhat furrowed," she added, passing a hand over his forehead. "Mr. Fox, are you in love, perchance?"

"Mr. Fox," he admitted grudgingly, "is plenty in love."

"And what is Mr. Fox in love with, pray?" His wife asked.

"With you, saluted wench."

Allaire glanced at him keenly, lounging sideways against the cushions, her hands clasped against one hip.

"Darling, this is a hell of a time to tell me a thing like that, don't you think?"

"Why? Because I suddenly realize you're really leaving? Back to the States with this place just an interlude in your life?"

He took both of her hands and she yielded them, unresisting. "I'm just shooting the works, Allaire—like throwing a last ditch forward pass. I'm crazy about you."

His eyes crinkled at the corners in his boyish grin. "If I'm not original, I can't help it. I'm just trying to ask you to marry me. And I'm going to chase you to the States to ask you again."

She tilted her head back and regarded him in mock estimation.

"Very acceptable. Harvard man, athletic, extraordinarily good-looking, rising in the diplomatic service, with enough money to be an Ambassador some day—only a catch."

"Yes," he commented, "and what I'm catching now is nobody's business. Still," he added, considering, "I haven't been let down so easy since the time I was lowered into a cradle at the age of thirty days."

"Don't, George," she said, smilingly. "I didn't mean it quite like that. But oh, can't you see—I don't want to talk about those things now. Not here in this place. I've just found out I don't know what I'm all about. I have to learn to stop crying for the moon. That's what this queer place finally taught me. There isn't any moon. Will you give me a cigarette?"

"Well," he said, holding a light for her, "that's settled and I'll just have to hope you're still in circulation by the time I get back to the States. Lord, that's a lot to expect."

The girl rested while this on a flat and stored at the top of an idly swinging gaiter slipper.

"I promise you," she said gently, "I will be."

They swept up to the dock. He escorted her up the gangway and immediately realized any hope of being with her alone before she sailed was void.

The girl party was hugging about "being chased out of town." They referred to Vera Cruz as though it was the name of a Mexican movie actress. Fox lost Allaire in the crowd. He went back to the dock as the whistle blew and eagerly searched the faces at the ship's rail.

Terry faces, (tomorrow), a terrible choice.

Married Comrades

BY ADRIE GARRISON

MARY PROMISES to "Be Good" and Go to Other Cabin.

MARY is as royal in her repentance as she is tumultuous in her temperance. As soon as she told me that she would "be good," and do whatever I asked her to do, instead of insisting upon disobeying Dr. Ruckey's mandate to stay out of Noel's room and leave him to Katherine's professional care, she came over to me, and slipping her arm through mine in contrarily fashion, said sweetly and reasonably:

"If I'm not to go back in Noel's room, there's no use in staying around here. Is there? What say I go on over to the other camp and see what the kids are up to? They've had time to think out to and a half varieties of devilry by this time."

"I think you misjudge them this time, Mary," I said smiling. "They really are on their best behavior tonight."

Madge Promises.

"Mebbe so, mebbe so," she said with a doubtful intonation. "But I'll keep my eyes wide open just the same. I'll be seeing you!"

She threw up one hand in a valiant attempt to appear nonchalant, and then, with a sudden abandonment of defenses, she made a little rush for me.

"Promise me!" she whispered vehemently, "that you'll let me know if Noel wakes and asks for me. I'm willing to stay away otherwise, but if my boy asks for me I'm going to him if I have to knock 20 doctors for a goal. You'll promise me, won't you?"

"Ver, I promise," I told her, for there was nothing else I could do in the face of her stressful emotion. But I told myself that it was extremely unlikely Noel would awaken until after Mary and I should have gone to bed.

Katherine, evidently elected to take care of Noel, would be under no restraint of a promise unless Mary should get the idea of visiting one from her. It was in the hope of forestalling such a notion that I added an injunction to my promise.

"If you're sure you don't mind going over to the other cabin to look after the boys," I said, "I wish you would tell them that they cannot go to bed until I find out where they are going to sleep. You see, originally they were to sleep in this cabin, but—"

Takes the Blame.

"I know," Mary said remorsefully. "This accident of Noel's has knocked your plans galley-west, of whatever direction a perfectly good galley is supposed to be. And it was all my fault, too."

"I was supposed to look out for rocks, but I got so absorbed in listening to Noel's spiel about this latest stunt his old man is pulling that I didn't see anything but his face until we hit that rock. Poor boy! he certainly is in a way over this yacht thing. But I forgot! You don't know anything about this latest performance, do you?"

"Only that Mr. Verillon has rented a large yacht and wishes Noel to accompany him on a cruise," I said.

"Then you don't know the length of it," she retorted, her voice rising above the low monotone in which we had couched our speech.

Doctor Perturbed.

I put up my hand warningly. "You'll have the doctor and nurses out here demanding your scalp!" I told her in a whisper, and with a startled look in her eyes she hurried to the door.

"I'll tell you all about it when you come over," she whispered, and was gone upon the last word.

I gave a hasty sigh of relief for one never can predict what Mary will do next, and I was glad to get her away without her making any more requests concerning Noel.

The door to the living room opened, and Katherine came through it, closing it noiselessly behind her.

"Didn't I hear Mary's voice?" she asked. "Mr. Ruckey is quite peeved. He wants to know how come."

"Tell him she's gone over to the other cabin and won't be back until morning," I said, determining at the same time to make my words come true.

"That ought to cheer his solicited soul," Katherine said. "But there are other things weighing on
